Description

Comprehensive Catalogue of Chinese Genealogies (CCCG) includes information on more than 50,000 genealogy books that were compiled in China from 1005 to 2007.

I collected the genealogy data from the Comprehensive Catalogue of Chinese Genealogies (中国家谱总目) edited by Wang Heming and published by Shanghai Ancient Works Publishing House in 2008. Wang Heming and his team has cataloged roughly 51,200 genealogy books from the end of the first millennium to the present day in a print registry. This effort represents the most comprehensive registry of known Chinese clan genealogies to date. Wang's team spent eight years gathering genealogy records from all known sources, including local and national archives and libraries, private holdings, and overseas collections, including all 10,000 microfilmed genealogy records archived by the Genealogical Society of Utah – the largest overseas collection of Chinese genealogy.

I digitized this entire print registry, and geocoded each genealogy book based on its reported location. To the best of my knowledge, this geocoding is the first such effort of its kind. I first used optical character recognition software to read the entire registry into a Microsoft Excel file. Figure 1 shows a snapshot of the print registry. Next, with the help of research assistants, I manually checked each entry in order to ensure accuracy. Finally, I relied on the China Historical Geographic Information System for latitudes and longitudes for the purposes of geocoding.

How to cite the data

The database should be referred to in publications as “Comprehensive Catalogue of Chinese Genealogies” with a link to the Harvard Dataverse url. Users are free to publish the results of their analyses without restrictions, with the understanding that the source of the data will be credited as the following:
